Chapter 6: Skills development in South Africa in 2007: Key features and challenges

Purpose 143
Structure 143
Factors impacting on the training rate 146
Training rate increase 146
Factors causing enterprises to increase training 146
Satisfaction with services provided by the SETAs 147
Rising training volumes generate wide disparities in access by enterprise size 149
Expenditure on training 149
Relationship between expenditure and training rate 151
Price, effort and duration of training 151
Training rate in occupational categories 152
Variation between SETAs in training performance 153
Training to recognised standards 154
Equity in training 156
Training equity in the NSDS: Race/gender/disability of all trained workers 156
Training equity in the NSS2007: Workers trained as a proportion of all workers employed by race, gender and disability 157
Enterprise participation in the NSDS 159
Enterprise registration with a SETA 159
Enterprises making grant claims 160
Grant administration system struggles to capture enterprises 160
Sustaining training practises 161
Supply side – a 'hidden' dimension 163

This report on the National Skills Survey of 2007 could not have been conducted without the support of the Department of Labour (DoL) which commissioned the research project, the participation of a large number of private enterprises, and a dedicated team of researchers and administrators in the Education, Science and Skills Development (ESSD) research programme at the Human Sciences Research Council (HSRC).

The HSRC team would like to express their gratitude to all private firms that took the time to complete and return the survey questionnaires.

Thanks are due to the following persons and organizations:

From the Department of Labour:

- Botshabelo Maja, Florus Prinsloo, Liz Thobejane and a number of colleagues from the Department of Labour who made important contributions in the shaping of the NSS2007 questionnaire. Through the course of the project, Botshabelo Maja and Florus Prinsloo especially continued to support it through the different phases.
- Francois Fouchè who interfaced between the Department of Labour and the South African Revenue Services in obtaining the sampleframe dataset from the latter.

From the Human Sciences Research Council:

- Matselane Tshukudu who managed project administration, and supervised the largescale questionnaire mailing and procurement processes.
- Mpo Manthe who controlled submission of questionnaires (postal, email and fax), reminder calls with respondents, and coordinated the mailing of questionnaires.
- Chwayita Msada who as an Intern, participated in interactions with the Department of Labour and the call centre service provider, and provided valuable support in all aspects of the project administration.
- Jo Lorentzen who made strategic suggestions regarding editing and focusing early versions of chapters in this report.
- Andre Kraak who played a pivotal role in the commissioning of the NSS2007 by the Department of Labour.
- Vijay Reddy under whose supportive leadership this project was brought to conclusion.

The service providers:

- i-Fundi, the BEE compliant Call Centre Service provider.
- Lynfer, the BEE compliant Data Capturing Service provider.
